

Continence pads at home

Community Nursing Patient Information Leaflet

Introduction

This leaflet gives information about how you can get continence pads when you leave hospital.

How can I get continence pads?

Your community nurse will assess you when you leave hospital to see if you need continence pads. Please note that the continence pads that you get through your community nurse are different from the ones we use in hospital.

The ward where you have stayed in hospital may ask the community nurse to visit you for the assessment. If the ward does not do this, you can ask your GP to refer you to your community nurse for a continence assessment.

Your community nurse may not be able to see you straight away so in the mean time you may have to buy pads yourself.

Where can I buy continence pads?

You can buy continence pads from most major supermarkets or pharmacies.

Can I find out more?

You can find out more about continence products from the following weblink:
